TO HAVE OR NOT TO HAVE

MUST-CARRY RULES

Council of Europe The topic dealt with in this latest publication in the IRIS Special series is the media policy commitment to ensuring that all viewers have access to certain core television content of particular public interest. This policy commitment requires that regulatory bodies take appropriate action to exert influence on the television market. One of the instruments available to regulators for this purpose is the system of must-carry obligations. Crucial questions on must-carry obligations: They were developed for cable television - are they still relevant for the digital era? Do they prevent market failure or do they run the risk of producing market distortion? How should Article 31 of the Universal Service Directive be interpreted? 'Must-carry' or 'must-offer'? Do competition law and access regulations make must-carry obsolete? The European approach (based on programme content) or the American approach (based on the type of broadcaster)? The present IRIS Special contains a comprehensive discussion of the key aspects of must-carry obligations and consists of 4 main parts: Workshop on must-carry obligations; What are we carrying across the EU these days?; Analog and digital must-carry obligations of cable and satellite television operators in the United States; The future of must-carry

TRANS NEW WAVE CINEMA

Taylor & Francis This book presents a critical cultural study of the Trans New Wave as a cinematic genre and explores its emergence in the twenty-first century. Drawing on a diverse range of texts, the cultural, social, aesthetic and ethical implications of the genre are placed within the context of rapidly changing understandings of gender diversity. From the cinematic borderlands of independent film festivals to wider public recognition via digital technologies, the genre encompasses a diverse range of texts from short films, documentaries, experimental films, to feature films and narratives that range across life histories, narratives and themes. The book presents transliteracy as an original theoretical approach to reading film representations of the Trans New Wave, and combines it with a new theoretical concept of cinematic ethnogenesis to investigate how the genre emerged from specific communities and the reciprocal interaction of audiences and texts. This interdisciplinary volume engages with contemporary issues of gender diversity, transgender studies, screen and media studies and film festival studies, and as such will be of great interest to scholars working in these fields and in media and cultural studies more generally.

Nicolae Sfetcu Movie is considered to be an important art form; films entertain, educate, enlighten and inspire audiences. Film is a term that encompasses motion pictures as individual projects, as well as — in metonymy — the field in general. The origin of the name comes from the fact that photographic film (also called filmstock) has historically been the primary medium for recording and displaying motion pictures. Many other terms exist — motion pictures (or just pictures or "picture"), the silver screen, photoplays, the cinema, picture shows, flicks — and commonly movies.

THE MOVIE IDIOM

FILM AS A POPULAR ART FORM

Waveland PressInc "The movie idiom" is an apt moniker for the wide-ranging issues addressed in film studies courses and examined in Stanley's accessible volume. Organized within three parts---The Technical-Artistic, The Historical-Institutional, and The Critical-Cultural---chief concepts include technical advances, shooting and editing techniques, the collaborative aspects of production, film history and tradition, industrial developments, narrative structures, acting approaches, stereotypical representations, genre conventions, and censorship concerns. Stanley's analysis of significant movies illuminates essential points, connects readers with actual "moviemaking," and stimulates the reader's own creativity Still photographs, frame enlargements, diagrams, and publicity material directly related to the specific concepts under consideration appear throughout the text. Full explanations of key terms and concepts are contained in the glossary. "The real strength....is its conception of the "movie idiom"....bridging production, history, and textual analysis."---Amy Villarejo, Cornell University "For me, the best thing....is its readability. It deals with a wide range of material in an intelligent, literate way. Unlike other textbooks, it covers a limited number of significant films in greater depth."---Arthur Fried, Plymouth State College "The coverage of early censorship is marvelous, as good as I've read anywhere in summary form."---Robin Matthews, Golden West College "I couldn't be more impressed with this book. I especially love its scope and its ability to cover a great deal of territory in a small amount of space."---Tom Isbell, University of Minnesota, Duluth "Because of the stories, because of the writing, because of the problem solving examples, I think this book could be a loved piece of reading."---Robin Bates, St. Mary's College of Maryland

TRANSNATIONAL CINEMA IN EUROPE

LIT Verlag Münster The attempt to produce films for the international market has led to lively exchanges and meeting points between local and national identity discourses and global processes of identity formation. Co-productions alone can no longer be seen as an incentive for national cultural production. Rather, it is necessary to regard co-productions as a privileged site for an analysis of the relations between identity, nation, and culture. Transnational Cinema in Europe is the result of a collaboration of two research groups in Madrid and Vienna. The book consists of articles by members of both research groups, as well as by several other experts. FILM, FORM, AND CULTURE

FOURTH EDITION

Routledge Film, Form, and Culture (4th edition) offers a lively introduction to both the formal and cultural aspects of film. With extensive analysis of films past and present, this textbook explores film from part to whole; from the smallest unit of the shot to the way shots are edited together to create narrative. It then examines those narratives (both fiction and non-fiction) as stories and genres that speak to the culture of their time and our perceptions of them today. Composition, editing, genres (such as the gangster film, the Western, science fiction, and melodrama) are analyzed alongside numerous images to illustrate the discussion. Chapters on the individuals who make films - the production designer, cinematographer, editor, composer, producer, director, and actor - illustrate the collaborative nature of filmmaking. This new edition includes: An expanded discussion of the digital 'revolution' in filmmaking: exploring the movement from celluloid to digital recording and editing of images, as well as the use of CGI A new chapter on international cinema that covers filmmaking from Italy to Mumbai offering students a broader understanding of cinema on a worldwide scale A new chapter on film acting that uses images to create a small catalogue of gestures and expressions that are recognizable in film after film Expanded content coverage and in-depth analysis throughout, including a visual analysis of a scene from Christopher Nolan's The Dark Knight An expanded chapter on the cultural contexts of film summarizes the theories of cultural and media studies, concluding with a comparative analysis of Alfred Hitchcock's Vertigo and Judd Apatow's This is 40 Over 260 images, many in color, that Additional resources for students and teachers can also be found on the companion website (www.routledge.com/cw/kolker), which includes additional case studies, discussion questions and links to useful websites.
